How beauteous o'er the blue expanse,
Pencilling their shadows on the evenin
sky,
The gathering clouds with gauze-like wings
unfold

Their heaven-wove tapestry: Veiling in mist the dim and wearled sun, Ere yet the drapery of his couch is won!

Behold! behold them now!
Tossing their gold-edged tresses on the breeze!

To heavenly symphonies! While distant, seen like hope to faith's clear allding like angels o'er the star-gen

Sleeps in calm splendor the cerulean blue!

While eye reposes on the lap of night.

You castellated tower
As proudly cuts its turrets on the sky.
As if the portals of its airy halls
Blazoned with heraldry!
And who shall say, but in its chambers glide
Pale courtiers' shadows—disembodied pride
